THE THESIS

The future of wealth isn’t another product. It’s a better architecture.

PROFILE

Architect of Modern Private Wealth

Timothy D. Nihill has spent more than two decades inside financial services—from BlackRock and Merrill Lynch to building independent wealth-management businesses. Today, he works at the intersection of family-office architecture, institutional digital assets, private markets, technology, and generational wealth.

He founded Ten Seven Capital to help sophisticated families coordinate wealth as one connected system, and Crypto Collaborative to provide institutional digital-asset infrastructure for the wealth management and financial services industries. His forthcoming book: The wealth system that was never offered to you. Until now.
